Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Friday 10 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Turning milder over the weekend, but still unsettled and windy.

This Evening and Tonight:
Any remaining showers over the hills should soon die away, with light winds and long clear spells leading to a widespread sharp frost and perhaps isolated icy patches. Minimum temperature -5 deg C (23 deg F).

Saturday:
Fine, cold and crisp to start, however soon clouding over from the west, ahead of a milder but wet and windy afternoon. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Remaining rather changeable, breezy and unsettled through this period, with some sunny intervals but also showers or longer spells of rain. Milder than of late, but tempered by the wind.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.